Important Notice

This index of Lutheran congregations and parishes in Australia, originally compiled by Peter Weiss in 1999, is regularly used by Lutheran Archives staff and volunteers. The index has been updated by Lutheran Archives volunteer Graham Ottens, whose work we gratefully acknowledge.

This version of the index has been prepared by Lutheran Archives for public research use, first made available on the Lutheran Archives website in 2024. Please see the bottom right corner for the date this version was last updated.

Please note that this index is a living document which is still being updated, meaning that the recency of information for each congregation and parish will vary. If necessary, the most recent information available for a congregation or parish can be confirmed by contacting Lutheran Archives directly.

The notes on the origins and history of places (given in italics beneath place-name headings) are the words of the original writer, Peter Weiss, and reflect his research and opinions. In most cases, these notes have not been verified or revised since the original time of writing.

An index of the careers of Lutheran pastors who have served in Australia and New Zealand has also been compiled, but for privacy reasons this has not been made publicly accessible. If you have queries relating to the career of a historical pastor, please contact Lutheran Archives directly.

Foreword

I hadn't been at the Lutheran Archives for very long before I realised that what was needed was an encyclopaedia of all Lutheran congregations in Australia. However, I never found time to get far in compiling such a reference work.

When during the year 1999 Peter Weiss handed me a copy of his book, Short General and Statistical History of the Australian Lutheran Church, I realised that the work had already been done. This book contains information about every Lutheran congregation and pastor in Australia, as well as useful historical material. Ever since then this book has been a great reference tool for me in my work at the Lutheran Archives.

As I look at the book I am stunned by the enormity of information it contains. It represents years of research in the Lutheran Archives gathering details from all possible historical sources. It certainly reflects the dedication that Peter has given to this task.

We tend to take the existence of encyclopaedias and dictionaries for granted in the modern world. Yet if we stop and think about the time and effort required to produce them, we would be overwhelmed by the figure. It is indeed significant that Peter has single-handedly produced the book.

It is inevitable that some mistakes will be found in the millions of pieces of information that are collected here. Since the first printing I have collaborated with Peter and provided him with corrections whenever I found errors. Any further alterations that can be provided for future printings will be greatly appreciated.

I congratulate Peter for providing this legacy to the historical study of Australian Lutheranism. What we have now is a great resource for students of Lutheran History in Australia.

Sequence of Information

All congregations are entered in chronological order, especially where more than one congregation or preaching place existed, or still exist. This applied to many migrant places after WWII. When two places were opened at the same time, they are placed in alphabetical order of synodical affiliation. Aged Care, Community Services, Colleges and Schools are placed in alphabetical order.

Where an entity is preceded by an asterisk (*), it no longer exists at that place. Where it is preceded by a plus sign (+), it is still functioning.

Entries are structured as follows:

Place name, state (previous names, if any).

*Origin of name, in many cases. History of place, in many cases.*¹

If same congregation appears elsewhere in this index under another name, reference given in bold.

+ or * affiliation with synods or independent pastors, and dates when the first church services were held.² Name of congregation and founding date. Buildings: church, hall, and/or church centre, with respective dedication dates. Lutheran day school, with dates (where available). Introduction of English services with dates (where available). Pastors, with years of service to this congregation. Parishes, with the years congregation (Cg) or preaching place (PP) was affiliated to it. Membership figures.³

+ or * Lutheran day schools, kindergartens, colleges, aged care with opening dates (where available), and Lutheran community services.

² The foundation date of a congregation or a preaching place may not coincide with first services, especially in the beginning of German settlements. Often services were held in private homes or in the open for months, or even years, before an official agreement was signed between a pastor, a synod and a congregation. Thus, in the compilation of this list, some dates are only estimated.
